

Expeditioner Accommodation – Australian Antarctic Division (AAD)

Dear Expeditioner,

Whilst you are engaged with the AAD, and staying in AAD arranged accommodation, the contract provisions contain strict requirements that you are required to adhere to.

As a result of the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic, AAD arranged accommodation in Hobart during the training period will be single (non-share), and self-contained where possible.

Due to state border restrictions and closures, there may be limited or no capacity for a family member to visit you during your training/pre-departure period in Hobart. However, if circumstances arise such that a family member can visit during this period, sharing with you in AAD arranged accommodation is acceptable only for short periods like a weekend or a few days.

If sharing with another expeditioner, before you make any arrangement to invite a visitor, you must obtain the prior agreement of the person who you are sharing with before proceeding.

As the AAD's accommodation contract only covers the cost of your accommodation, you must notify the accommodation provider and make arrangements for payment of any fee for an additional person. Failure to do so may result in your accommodation arrangement being terminated. Accommodation providers will not tolerate breaches of this contract as they provide a service based on the rates charged to the AAD for accommodation.

If you wish to bring more than one person, even for just a few days then you are required to organise and pay for your own separate accommodation. Pets are not permitted at any time.

Long term visitors, sharing AAD arranged accommodation, are not permitted.

Note: In some circumstances, expeditioners may be required to quarantine in State Government mandated accommodation upon arrival in Tasmania. In this situation, you will be required to comply with State Government direction and guidelines for mandated quarantine.
